

In Love and Reliance on God

It is relatively easy to learn about God's love for us. This is a fact ingrained within Christian teaching and taught to children at Sunday School. But what does it mean for us to love God? A relationship is a two way street; simply receiving love does not create a strong bond. Everyday, God is with us, he knows us intimately and is always there to support us. Are we there with God as well? I feel that it is important to continue to instill within the hearts of those at CCF that faith is not a singular event, a christian environment, or a prayer when you need it, but faith is a continual relationship with a real God.

Practically, it is important to continually rely on God. In John 15:5 Jesus says, "I am the vine; you are the branches... apart from me you can do nothing." Isaiah 55:8-9 says His ways are higher than our ways. So who are we to rely on and pride ourselves in our own limited abilities, when the One who gave us those abilities also knows a far greater plan? As faith extends to daily life, it is only natural to rely on God through every struggle in our school, work, or social lives.

Through this, I wish to primarily encourage myself and all of committee to love and rely on God. It is not through our work that CCF can run properly, have enough money, and complete all its goals, but it is God working through us. In times of inevitable stress and pressure, it is only God's miraculous grace that allows us to succeed. As well, as we develop our personal walks with God, we lead by example to the fellowship on how broken vessels can be filled with God's love.

The transformation of the self and the renewal of one's identity in Christ does not come from a vacuum. By creating opportunities for people to see, experience and share God's love, CCF can play a role in many people's walks in faith to understand what it truly means to continually walk with God and rely on Him. It is through this posture of being all in, that we can fan the flames of a revival of CCF, UofT and beyond.
