

CCF Vision 2025

My vision for CCF is for it to be a fellowship where we encourage one another to never grow complacent in our walks with God but instead to continually seek Him with a heart full of childlike faith and curiosity. Jesus said, “Truly I tell you, unless you change and become like little children, you will never enter the kingdom of heaven” (Matthew 18:3). A childlike faith is one that is eager to learn, open to wonder, and full of trust. I hope that as a community, we push each other to grow deeper in our relationship with Him—not settling for where we are now but always longing to know Him more.

At the same time, I hope to see our huddled groups branch out to others on campus and even within CCF itself. I feel that many of us may not truly know each other's walks of faith—how we came to know Christ, the struggles we've faced, or the ways God is actively working in our lives. We are called to be more than just a group of people who meet weekly; we are called to be a family in Christ. As Proverbs 27:17 says, “As iron sharpens iron, so one person sharpens another.” True fellowship means holding one another accountable, lifting each other up in prayer, and walking alongside each other in faith. It means trusting our brothers and sisters in Christ with our burdens, encouraging one another to seek God in all things, and always reminding each other that Christ is at the center of it all: “He is before all things, and in him all things hold together” (Colossians 1:17). I desire to see CCF more unified beyond just familiarity and comfort. I encourage us to share our testimonies and deepen our understanding of one another. We may remain on the surface with each other out of comfortability, but God calls us to a deeper fellowship—one where we can rejoice together, weep together, and spur each other on in Christ - “And let us consider how we may spur one another on toward love and good deeds, not giving up meeting together, as some are in the habit of doing, but encouraging one another—and all the more as you see the Day approaching” (Hebrews 10:24-25). My hope is that we will be a fellowship that shares openly, encouraging each other towards love and goodness, and reminding one another of God's faithfulness in our lives.

I also long for CCF to have the courage to zealously and passionately profess our faith—not just in moments of victory, but through every season of life. Too often, we only celebrate God after He has delivered us, after the struggle has passed. But true faith calls us to rejoice in every season, even in trials, because we know that God is refining us through them. “Consider it pure joy, my brothers and sisters, whenever you face trials of many kinds, because you know that the testing of your faith produces perseverance” (James 1:2-3). I want us to learn to find joy not just in our deliverance but also in the lowest moments, trusting that God is working in us through every moment.

Another part of my vision is for us to reflect on the foundation of our faith and continually ask ourselves: Why do we believe in Him? When we take the time to truly reflect on who God is, we deepen our conviction and our ability to share Him with others. I also hope that CCF can be a warm and welcoming space for both new believers and those who are simply curious about faith. The Bible reminds us in 1 John 4:8, “Whoever does not love does not know God, because God is love.” May we embody that love in all that we do—greeting new faces with kindness, making space for honest questions, and encouraging one another to seek Him wholeheartedly.

Lastly, I pray that our fellowship will be a place filled with the joy of the Holy Spirit every single week. That when we come together, we don't just gather out of habit but out of a deep desire to experience God's presence and love. May we cultivate a space where His Spirit moves freely, where we uplift and strengthen one another, and where we continually grow in passion for Him. As Romans 1:16 declares, "For I am not ashamed of the gospel, because it is the power of God that brings salvation to everyone who believes: first to the Jew, then to the Gentile." May we never be ashamed to share the good news, to boldly declare our love for Him, and to walk forward in faith together as one body in Christ.
